the nature of time and the basis of time keeping as well as natural clocks. For example, we shall see that the often made statement that a periodic process is the basis of a clock is misleading. The development of astronomy in the period from Newton to the end of the 19th century nicely illustrates Mach's words recalled above.

THE NATURE OF TIME - Julian Barbour

1. Classical Theory S. W. Hawking In these lectures Roger Penrose and I will put forward our related but rather different viewpoints on the nature of space and time. We shall speak alternately and shall give three lectures each, followed by a discussion on our different approaches. I should emphasize that these will be technical lectures.

1. Classical Theory - Intro to Crow Healing Network

Time is an abstract entity created by the human mind on the basis of the experience of change. Physical reality is a process of ceaseless becoming and vanishing; time is not a part of that process.

In The Nature of Space and Time, two of the world's most famous physicists—Stephen Hawking (A Brief History of Time) and Roger Penrose (The Road to Reality)—debate these questions. The authors outline how their positions have further diverged on a number of key issues, including the spatial geometry of the universe, inflationary versus cyclic theories of the cosmos, and the black-hole information-loss paradox.
